This book covers the basics you need to get started, and you can safely skip to the part of the book you want to read first. Certified Nurse Midwife Women's Health Certified Nurse Midwives - in all their diversity Midwifery care is known as a gentle care and love as in all medical specialties. It supports women to achieve better birth outcomes and deliver a beautiful baby. Certified Nurse Midwives (CNMs) are highly skilled professionals who have received special training in the recognition, assessment, prevention, care and treatment of normal and abnormal medical and obstetric conditions of childbirth, women and their babies. With a strong focus on educating their patients, CNMs strive to help deliver a healthy pregnancy and a healthy baby. While CNMs are highly skilled, they are not physicians. They are regulated by the North Dakota Board of Nursing. CNMs work under the supervision of a doctor. CNMs are not allowed to perform procedures such as a tubal ligation on their own. Women may have a CNM or physician providing care. For example, a woman may have a doctor seeing her during her first prenatal visit and CNM care during her second and third trimesters. Having both a physician and a CNM at the same visit may help her work through any issues she may have at the time. CNMs who are able to provide most of the services in a hospital setting are in demand in this medically advanced state. CNMs are the only health care providers licensed in North Dakota that are allowed to provide most non-invasive obstetrical services, such as: An electronic prenatal and post-natal care schedule Administration of medications Provide routine medical education to the hospital staff Make referrals to specialists as needed CNMs play a role in guiding women through their prenatal care. CNMs help women make personal decisions to ensure they are properly cared for and given a safe environment to have their baby. No matter what type of birth you choose, you can get the great care you need from a CNM. CNMs are primary caregivers during labor and delivery, typically providing prenatal care to a woman throughout her pregnancy and labor and delivery to the baby. During labor, CNMs can assist with preparing the woman's birth environment, assist in the birth of the baby and support the mother with pain relief during labor.
