Guaramaca clara en zapoteIron is a crucial element involved in a variety of vital cellular processes including electron transport, antioxidant defense, and DNA synthesis. The iron-regulatory hormone hepcidin regulates iron absorption, tissue distribution and storage. In addition, hepcidin has been implicated in both human and murine anemias associated with ineffective erythropoiesis. Hepcidin functions as a hormone in mammals and synthesized as a pro-hormone in hepatocytes. Processing involves endoproteolytic cleavage of the precursor polypeptide (prohepcidin) to form mature hepcidin. Although the complete structure of the human hepcidin promoter has not been determined, it is known that the 5'-flanking region of the human hepcidin gene contains a TATA box, and a GATA-1 binding motif. The 5'-flanking region of the murine hepcidin gene has been studied in detail but contains a single TATA box and one GATA-1 binding site. The overall goal of this proposal is to define the cis-acting elements of the hepcidin promoter and examine their role in the regulation of hepcidin expression during erythropoiesis and erythroid differentiation. We will concentrate on three specific aims:

1. To identify hepcidin binding site(s) within the human and murine promoters, using a combination of bioinformatics and functional analyses of promoter sequences;
2. To define the transcription factors that bind to the hepcidin promoter in human and murine cell lines; and
3. To examine the role of hepcidin in the regulation of hepcidin expression during erythropoiesis and erythroid differentiation. We will use molecular and cellular approaches to investigate the effect of different types of iron on hepcidin expression in the human erythroleukemia cell line K562 and primary murine erythroid cells. We will examine the role of GATA-1 in hepcidin regulation using gain- and loss-of-function approaches, and study the regulation of hepcidin expression in a GATA-1 conditional knock-out mouse model. We will also define the role of hepcidin in erythroid differentiation by examining the effect of iron on hepcidin mRNA and protein expression in K562 cells using different concentrations of iron. A: The steps required to do this are:- Create your own build which matches the new OS version For example, if you are upgrading from Windows 7 x64 to Windows 10 x64, your build would be build #100 (7x64) Run the upgrade tool, and select the first option: Upgrade my product to Windows 10, without touching my files, my settings, or my apps That includes the app you are trying to remove (in this case, may I advice you to backup the older version first, and then try this?) To check the version number of Windows 10, run `windowsssysteminfo Upgrade` from the build you just created The first time you run the upgrade tool, you should be asked to do a clean install of the current version. Now, when you go to device manager, you should see a new "Windows" device and its version number will match that of Windows 10. Finally, click through the options and let it do its thing Wait for it to complete Upgrade will finish, and you're all set BTW, I have tested this successfully myself, and it works like a charm. Happy days :) Q: Add columns to table based on two dataframes I am trying to attach two dataframes into a table in R and I am getting the following error: Error in `as.data.frame.default(x[[i]], optional = TRUE, stringsAsFactors = stringsAsFactors)` : cannot coerce class `"data.frame"` to a data.frame My data has the following format df1: Fruits | Vegetables ----- apple tomato banana carrot watermelon celery df2: Type | Value

----- apple 20 banana 30 I would like the output to look like Fruits | Vegetables | Type | Value

apple tomato apple 20 banana carrot banana 30
