If you're considering having your images created by a professional photographer, ask her about her pricing structure. She may offer a flat fee of $100 to $500 for an individual shoot, but most photographers charge by the hour. If she has a better rate than your photographer friend, consider hiring a pro. Finally, be aware that Photoshop is very expensive. The good news is that most of Photoshop is free. In this case, the best news is that that free edition is extremely powerful. The learning curve can be steep, and even experienced photo editors sometimes need a little time to figure it out. # CAUTION Many people think they can master Photoshop right away. Their first project can look good, but it's too advanced and requires far too much time. To master Photoshop, create multiple projects. # Opening and saving images You're probably familiar with opening images in a program and then saving the image. `_File_` is the verb for this process. In the same way, you can `_save_` images.

to say, if you can't do the time, don't do the crime! *** This is an expanded and updated version of a commentary I published at AIPAC in March 2008. It was published in its original form at AIPAC, as well. I am too Jewish and not radical enough for the New York Times, for example, or the Washington Post, who saw fit to ignore me and discredit me by portraying me as a "conspiracy theorist" and "anti-semitic." As a consequence, it is virtually impossible for “the Jewish establishment” to see me from a Jewish perspective when it comes to Jewish issues. It is not that they are against me. They just don’t know me. And, of course, they don’t know “AIPAC.” In fact, for a while, I didn’t think I would be allowed to work on Jewish issues at AIPAC, or anywhere else, for that matter, as long as I was still a member of the Communist Party. When that finally occurred, and I felt that I could present this commentary to Jewish audiences without fear of reprisal, I've been re-instated as an active member. Then I should not be asked to restrict myself to only presenting to Orthodox audiences, and I will not be. I'm open to Jewish audiences, but I will not do it because the New York Times, for example, offers me no Jewish audience. Throughout this, I have been highly critical of the Communist Party. At the point where I stopped being a Communist Party member, I was already mired in a career and lifestyle that was going nowhere, and I had no energy to “fight for the party.” So I declined to get involved in the “anti-imperialist” issue, going instead into the publishing field, writing books on U.S. foreign policy that are still highly regarded in the left-liberal world. So, while the specifics of the debate on Jewish issues have little to do with the “anti-imperialist” discussion, some of my positions on these issues are in line with the “anti-imperialist” argument, and I believe I have a certain base from which to launch these arguments. In the meantime, the question of “anti-Semitism” remains a

In vitro investigations of mercury sorption by carbonaceous sorbents and activated carbon.

Commercially available carbonaceous sorbents (activated carbons, mesoporous silica, carbon nanotubes, and graphite) and activated carbon alone were studied as potential mercury sorbents using the batch technique to evaluate their performance. It was found that the uptake of Hg(II) can be affected by pH, sorbent size, and the mercury speciation in the test solution. Using the batch approach, the effect of the quantity of mercury sorbent added is studied, and results demonstrate that an increased amount of Hg(II) increases the efficiency of the sorbents. The highest Hg(II)

uptake of activated carbon was obtained at pH 5.0, compared to the others. Adsorption of Hg(II) was kinetically controlled by the metal ions. The equilibrium isotherms of Hg(II) adsorption in the test sorbents, followed the Langmuir model. The results demonstrate that these sorbents are suitable for the adsorption of Hg(II) from aqueous solution in the concentration range of 0-40 ppm. Experimental conditions were optimized to determine the applicability of the sorbents for regeneration of Hg(II) and to study the reusability of the sorbents. The activated carbon was found to be suitable for reusing up to 10 times with no significant loss in sorption capacity. Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers have sold out the largest North American arena of the summer with a performance at Camden's BB&T Pavilion. They will return to the band's U.S. hometown for a two-week stint, performing on July 28 and 29. "We are so thrilled to be back at BB&T," says Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers. “We love these songs and are looking forward to the adoration of our fans.” Petty is set to release his 30th studio album, Hypnotic Eye, Aug. 31, while the band has announced their plans to enter the studio in the fall to work on new material for their 2015 tour. Petty is currently featured on the soundtrack to the movie “John Wick” and has announced the release of his first solo album for 50 years, No Other Than. The follow-up to 2011’s Traveling Will
