Graphics Programs for PC Although computer graphics have historically been considered the domain of professional graphics editors, these days even the most hardcore gamers also edit their own graphics to create or optimize for their games. If you know Photoshop at all, you'll be comfortable editing graphics in Windows. However, there are other options as well. In this section, I cover some of the programs you might need to alter your graphics to optimize them for use in the fields shown here.

This article will help you get started using it and get a feel for some of the different tools that are available. Not all versions of Photoshop and Elements are compatible with the same versions. Therefore, if you see an older version number than it is likely a version of Photoshop you will not be able to use. Share Article The Fair Food Network, located in the new Consumer Growth Center at Fair Food Network headquarters in Latham, New York, recently awarded the national title of Pure Food Advocate to Fair Food Network for its steadfast commitment to local and organic food production and its efforts to empower consumers and manufacturers to demand higher standards. Pure Food Advocate, New York The Fair Food Network's reputation for supporting local organic and sustainable agriculture will never change. Having been an advocate for years, our award is a tremendous honor. Fairfield, CT (PRWEB)May 24, 2011 The Fair Food Network, a leading national and regional sustainable food production advocacy group, announced today that it has been awarded the title of Pure Food Advocate by the Good Food Institute of Washington, D.C. The Pure Food Advocate designation recognizes organizations that have made significant contributions toward ensuring that all food – produced locally or regionally or in an organic or sustainable manner – is of the highest quality.

Organizations are honored for exemplary leadership in demonstrating that the best standards are those that support local and sustainable agriculture. A founding member of the Good Food Institute, the Fair Food Network has long been an advocate for local and sustainable food production, and this recognition is a validation of the effort that the organization has put into this direction. “The Fair Food Network’s reputation for supporting local organic and sustainable agriculture will never change,” said Carrie Rusell, executive director of the Fair Food Network. “Having been an advocate for years, this award is a tremendous honor.” The Fair Food Network’s Pure Food Advocate award is the highest honor that the organization has bestowed. The nationally recognized Pure Food Advocate Recognition Program promotes and rewards the involvement of large food buyers, processors, retailers, consumers and professional associations that make a positive difference in the food industry. The Fair Food Network is a group of 22 leaders in the national food movement that empowers consumers, producers, policymakers and business through education, advocacy, products and technology.

Founded in 1996, the organization's early successes include The Organic Trade Association's first certification of organic food, the founding of the National Organic Program and the certification of imported organic food. Today, the Fair Food Network includes members from the food and beverage, food manufacturing and retail sectors; food, agriculture, environment, health, education and policy groups; and farmers, ranchers and consumers. What's New In?

Michael Gradwohl Michael Gradwohl (19 May 1919 – 24 December 2012) was an Austrian jurist, public official and teacher of law. Life Gradwohl was born in Vienna. After high school, he undertook a teachers training course and first gained employment at the Landesschule Hof. In the years following World War II, he taught mathematics at the theoretical school of the University of Vienna and, from 1945 to 1948, he studied law at the University of Vienna, obtaining his law degree in 1952. Gradwohl served from 1952 to 1981 as a judge in the first instance, second instance and appellate courts of the Austrian Federal Constitutional Court and, from 1961 to 1969, he was one of the judges of the Federal Constitutional Court. In 1977, Gradwohl chaired the Commission for the revision of Section 180a of the Austrian Criminal Code, which was passed into law the following year. The new law, which was the first reform of its kind in German-speaking countries, was aimed at addressing what many officials of the time believed to be a gap in social legislation which allowed individuals convicted of a crime to return to a society shouldersociety. The new law provided for a general right to a substantial basic income to combat poverty. Gradwohl retired in 1981 and took up a position as professor of international law and criminal law at the University of Vienna. He remained active as a judge on several committees. Family Gradwohl was married to Edit Gradwohl (née Dörsek). The couple met while they were students at the University of Vienna. They had three children: Hans (b. 1947), Lisa (b. 1952) and Jeanette (b. 1956). Lisa's second marriage was to Peter Lawin. Michael Gradwohl died in Vienna on Christmas Eve 2012. Awards Gradwohl was awarded the Michael-

Stange-Medaille (Honorary Award) of the University of Vienna in 1991.
