Fifa 22 HACK

"In FIFA 20 we achieved so much with so little," said Timo "TIMO" Taavitsainen, Head of Gameplay for FIFA. "We had 12 players on-board creating excitement and atmosphere in the match with so much data enabled us to make the game feel alive. But our previous engine still had some technical limits. HyperMotion technology has been in development for a while and has helped us achieve more than we thought possible." Introducing FIFA 22's HyperMotion Technology Timo Taavitsainen, Head of Gameplay, shares his thoughts on how the latest technology helps bring the on-pitch atmosphere to life. "FIFA 20 was only possible thanks to the work of so many talented developers and the feedback from so many passionate fans," said Tanya Zyigner, Director of Global Marketing, Electronic Arts. "We are committed to listening to fans around the world and continue to make FIFA the most popular football game." HyperMotion Technology HyperMotion Technology was developed over two years. Its core technology allows for the collection of more in-game data than ever before, while also reducing the amount of data used by the player models to bring them to life. "With HyperMotion technology we have been able to use the maximum amount of information available, which in turn has allowed us to create more detailed animations than ever before," said Timo Taavitsainen. "A single-player match now has more animation than the physical models used in FIFA 20. Our new player models move so much like the real thing and are now more expressive than ever. In a nutshell, HyperMotion allows us to make the game more lifelike." Data gathered in real-life The technology ensures the game has accurate match replays so the user can use them for analysis and coaching purposes. It also makes audio options more realistic so the player's on-pitch experience can be matched to the footage. The tech is not only used in FIFA 22 but also in many of EA SPORTS' other EA SPORTS FIFA games, allowing for greater depth, better pacing and overall realism. The faces and expressions of the player models were modeled after the real players as much as possible. The skin tones, face shapes and muscle tension work closely together with the animations to create more life-like visuals. But it does not stop there, the HyperMotion tech takes the faces in-game further by capturing
