With this rule in place, we can evaluate at the end of each year the number of sales by country for each region. Example: `SELECT SUM(NetSales) AS 'Total Revenue' FROM mytable WHERE RevenueType = 'Service' AND Year = '2016' AND Country = 'USA'` This query will return the total revenue from USA sales in 2016. The column RevenueType is a keyword in Oracle that designates the value of a column. In this case, it is Service. The WHERE clause filters results from the table, based on the values provided in the parentheses. The SUM statement performs a summation of all values that matched the condition. Above you can see the ProductSales table. If you then want to add another value to the table you can use an UPDATE statement. As you can see from the above example, you would create a new table (for example, ProductSalesRevised ) with the same structure as ProductSales. Then you would alter the existing table to add the new values, or as shown above to have them added at the end of each year. Please read the "Syntax" link in the second example to find out more about the UPDATE statement. A: The syntax is a little different than you were thinking. If you do this: `update order_details set sal = 2345 where order_id = 1` It will update the SAL column with 2345. If you do this: `update order_details set sal = sal + 2345 where order_id = 1` It will update the SAL column with sal + 2345. John Oliver is already a professional expert on gun control. He might be given to a bit of hyperbole — his list of the Top 25 Dumbest Gun Control Ideas ever (two of which are set up on Google Docs but can't be saved in the online text editors out there) — but he also has an impressive track record on the issue. Last year, Oliver (along with the New York Daily News) practically singlehandedly promoted "March for Our Lives" — a (mostly) kid-focused protest against the school shooting epidemic in the U.S. — with his "Undemocratic Act" segment, a scathing takedown of the NRA and Congress. And, as we learned late Sunday night, he's having no problem making
