Therefore when it comes to commanding troops, there is always a cavalry general and the rest tend to be more like characters in Grand strategy games. The trade off in the complexity of their stats and units is that in Clash of Empires they tend to be much more effective. This guide is meant to help you get the most out of your troops, which, is easy enough. But when it comes to commanding armies, you have access to a whole lot more than a few different types of buildings and a few units. You also have access to other units, which is where this guide gets confusing. These are the formations that you can use to increase the strength of your troops: Walls There are three types of walls in the game, but only one of them works in the most useful way for building army strength: the hexside wall. You can make them from tree logs, and then there are usually lots of trees in the game. All tree logs cost 16 production, and trees cost 4. Hexside walls cost between 20 and 40 production depending on the placement and size of the wall. Hexside walls are great for covering walls, but they are also fairly weak, so you should build as many as you can to help with each other's weaknesses. You can build walls as long as you have supply, and you must build a new hex before you can build another hexside wall. To make them easier to build, you can also use fire to break the logs into lumber, which then costs 1 production per tile. Barracks Barracks cost 25 and they only cost 1 to build. They are usually set up next to hexside walls. They are very useful for using your units for construction, and if you use it well, they can give you lots of extra supplies for a low cost. Overall, they are not that good, but they are easy to make 648931e174
