By default, Photoshop's user interface resembles that of Windows, so you can use your mouse in the same way you would in Windows to draw, crop, rotate, and move things around the workspace. Finding your way around Photoshop Photoshop comes with a set of tools and panels that you use to create and manipulate an image. To make the most of Photoshop, you should become familiar with its tools, including the following: Photoshop Elements can be used to create a layered TIFF file on a color monitor or as a high-resolution TIFF file on a printer. The default file format is still the layered TIFF file. You can apply adjustment layers and change their opacity, layer masks, and other settings. You can import and export files. Photoshop Elements is only for non-profit use, which requires you to apply for a license, and it costs $150, which is somewhat more than Photoshop CC. You can use Photoshop CC without a license, but you are running the risk of being accused of copyright infringement. The Photoshop Elements and Photoshop CC tools work somewhat differently from each other. In Photoshop Elements, you can edit your image by using the tools on the History panel on the right side of the workspace. You can work with your file on a color monitor as you do with most other image-editing programs. In Photoshop CC, you can also use the tools on the History panel but can also save images directly in Photoshop CC's file format. The Creative Cloud, which includes Photoshop, is offered in two versions: Photoshop and Photoshop CC. If you buy a Creative Cloud subscription, you have access to all Photoshop and Photoshop-compatible programs. If you buy only Photoshop (as part of an Education or Essentials subscription), you can save and work with Photoshop-compatible files on a color monitor, but you can't save Photoshop-compatible files. The tools work in conjunction with the workspace. The workspace, which is represented by the light-gray bars on the sides of the work area, contains features such as the tools, the Toolbox, and the panels. To do anything in Photoshop, you first select an object on the monitor or in the document — a selection. After you make the selection, the tools you need to create a new object are on the workspace. Creating a new file with Photoshop You can create a new file in Photoshop by clicking the New button on the main menu bar. This process is the same as creating a new file with any

More than 2,000 refugees settled in Thailand have escaped Phnom Penh and other Cambodian cities by sea this year, fleeing the ongoing hostilities with neighbouring Thailand, local authorities said. They included people from five different countries, including Eritrea, Ethiopia, Sri Lanka, Bangladesh and Myanmar, said Maha Sombun from the Department of Refugee Reception Centre (DRC) in Chamchuri district. She said the number was unprecedented, with the exodus comparable to refugees fleeing the Myanmar military over the past few months. Many of the refugees came to Thailand in search of jobs, with some hoping to become "boat people", or seek refugee status. But most of the ones who were rescued were not willing to be resettled in Thailand, as many were not familiar with the country's system, Sombun said. "We mostly assist those who refuse to be resettled in Thailand," she said. "We persuade them that it is better for them to return to their countries of origin." Somaly, a refugee from Laos who fled via boat to Thailand, said that he had been dealing with people from other countries for several years. He said he had helped another 36 refugees recently, despite the risks. "The situation in Cambodia is very dangerous," Somaly said. "I have no clear idea of what is going on in Cambodia." Boat people The majority of refugees from Cambodia have fled the civil war between the government and the Khmer Rouge, he said. "Many people are forced to flee from their villages because of the fighting, which is taking place almost everywhere. The Khmer Rouge is winning, they have control of the country," he said. Many of the refugees have settled in border camps such as Chani in Preah Vihear province or Srepok in Pursat province. Mahila Aow Phasal, a Cambodian who lives in Australia, is also helping to support refugees, especially children, living in the border camps. This year, she helped support 33 children living in the Kampong Cham refugee camp alone. "Unfortunately many of the children live with AIDS and malaria," she said. "They need help to be treated and to go to school." Aow Phasal said there was not enough help from both the UN and the Australian government, which she believes is due to the strained relations between Cambodia and the UN
