The announcement was made at an oil and gas conference in Calgary, where Loblaw was promoting its involvement in a $1.2 billion Western Canada Industrial Park in Fort Saskatchewan, Alta. Corporate watchdog of Canada has launched an investigation of Loblaw over its sale of aborted human fetal tissue for research and medical purposes, according to the National Post. The National Post, citing a report from the Canadian Press, said the investigation was launched Friday after the Canadian Press wrote about Loblaw's role in a $200,000 donation to advance research on fetal stem cells. The Canadian Press reported that the donation to the British Columbia Fertility Care Society in Vancouver involved the sale of fetuses that were later aborted. Loblaw said it has stopped buying oil and gas company seed and that it will no longer sell seeds made from animals that have been cloned from embryos from human eggs. 648931e174
