Precision location of the vasculature is important for treatment of ischemic disease of the kidney. We describe the use of saturation technology (ST) to identify renal vasculature and describe the feasibility of magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) of renal arteries with ST. We obtained renal-artery phase-encoding scans of the kidneys at 1.5 T and 3 T on 9 healthy subjects. ST was achieved by off-resonance saturation during acquisition. Images were calculated as contrast maps with subsequent subtraction of the off-resonance scan. We used T1-weighted and unenhanced T2-weighted images to compare the results with ST-MRI. The distance between arterial branches was similar on MRI and unenhanced T2-weighted images. The number of arterial branches was similar on unenhanced T2-weighted images and contrast-enhanced images. ST-MRI can be used to acquire anatomical images of the renal vasculature with a good signal-to-noise ratio.Q: Why is python list not containing the data after SRE module execution When I run a program on python (sublime text) the execution stops immediately after the module sre. It shows me this result: >>> from sre import sre_compile >>> compiled_re = sre_compile(regex, flags) >>> compiled_re >>> s = [re.sub('hello','goodbye',item) for item in 'hello world'] >>> s [] I am wondering why s is not containing any of the values in list's I am guessing this is because the execution of the sre module is stopping the execution of the program but I cannot understand why. I am relatively new to python and coding. So please point out any mistakes in my code. P.S: -I understand that a regex is a very fundamental thing to understand but I am trying to understand the cause of this error. A: Regex
