FIFA 22 introduces “HyperMotion Technology” (or HMT). This is a first in the franchise for FIFA, and we also believe it’s the first time a sports video game’s content uses motion capture data from a real-life football match. This first-of-its-kind multiplayer mode, which will be rolled out in standalone content later this year, is the most visually realistic recreation of what it’s like to play football at the highest intensity, and was created by the video game’s development team. This exciting new gameplay feature is an example of how we’re now pushing our creative limits to deliver to fans a unique, immersive and unprecedented gameplay experience. The most recent information about FIFA 21 features can be found here. 22nd May, 2019 View our FIFA 21 Ultimate Team Page in-game - Daniel Passman, Senior Producer News Carnegie Mellon University's Computer Science Department is hosting their first convocation ceremony this May 24, 2019. The top 15 students will be recognized and honored during the commencement ceremony along with the Chancellor, President, Board of Trustees and National Science Foundation (NSF). Those who have been nominated for Distinguished Speakers and Awardees will learn if they have been selected during their Social Event on Thursday, May 23, 2019 at 5:30 p.m. in the HS Research Space, Carnegie Mellon University's Grand Hall of Science.
