The form submission will be via a Google Maps form, but the form can be submitted to any page on the Internet, like example.com/pagename, so the current location of the form submission is not necessarily on the same domain as the target page. A: Assuming your script is run server-side, you may do something like this : `var url = window.location;` This will give you the document.URL of the page (url) where the script is being run. The Third Reich is a strange and lovely story, full of people who loved each other, and a government that didn't. It is the "mythical evil empire," and so it is often dismissed as a novel, but it is as much about the making of a myth as it is about the tragedy of a people. The story of Nazi Germany is familiar now, so it would be easy to make light of this piece, but the book shows that Germany in the 1920s was alive with the dreams and hopes of modernity. Fritz Lang and Marlene Dietrich, Joseph Goebbels, Hitler, and many of the others are individuals drawn into a terrifying vision of modernity that was wrong but beautiful. The Third Reich is the first new biography to appear in nearly ten years. It is written by the historian Richard Evans, who has a unique first-hand experience of the Third Reich. His first book about Hitler, Messengers of Deception, was published in 1991 and had an immediate impact, and it was eventually translated into English as The Coming of the Third Reich. He is a consultant on matters relating to the 1930s, and so he has a unique perspective on the subject. The Third Reich, a book I haven't heard of, is more than a biography of Hitler. It looks at the era from the beginning, and shows how Germany in the mid-1920s was a world in which Hitler as Historically, treatment of infection in vascular grafts has been directed at debridement, removal of the graft, and systemic antibiotic therapy. However, this approach has been associated with considerable morbidity and mortality. Endovascular management of aortic graft infection has gained popularity as an alternative approach to treatment. Concern has arisen, however, regarding the durability of such a device. Furthermore, as in any endovascular approach, complications associated with stent grafts may be encountered. At the University of Alabama at Birmingham, we have adopted a combined approach of aggressive systemic antibiotic therapy with rapid aortic debridement and endovascular therapy utilizing stent grafts. We report a patient with infected aortic grafts that survived debridement followed by stent graft placement in a manner that, despite the presence of probable hardware failure, may have been due to recurrent infection.

Q: Accessing a directory on multiple machines on a network with wildcard I'm working on a software that run on a variety of platforms (running Ubuntu, Ubuntu on Windows, RHEL, etc). All our programs are installed into a directory with a "plat" subdirectory, e.g. /home/server/plat/programs/ Now I have a set of machines and I want to install the same kind of software on all of them without installing it on each one of them. I have been looking into the LDAP and I would like to understand what is the best solution I have to represent all these machines I want to install this software on and how I can access them with a simple wildcard. I came up with the following solution, which does not work, as it only takes the first machine in the list: group: LDAP cn: "LDAP group" member[cn=%{GROUP-NAME},ou=%,cn=%{GROUP-NAME},ou=software,dc=%{GROUP-NAME},dc=%{GROUP-NAME},dc=fr]"%{GROUP-
