“After the success of FIFA 15, we wanted to expand the scope of what we could do to create an incredible gameplay experience – that’s why we used the Virtual Pro Player model – a completely motion-captured version of a real-life player in every game.” said Jonathan Morhahn, senior producer at EA SPORTS. “This was a big challenge, but we believe we’ve delivered the game that fans have been asking for.” In addition to the Virtual Pro Player, FIFA 22 also features “HyperReality,” which uses visual, virtual and augmented reality technology to create unique player movements and gameplay. “HyperReality” technology in FIFA 22 is powered by real-time data captured from the world’s leading motion capture suit manufacturer, C-Frame. Using data from these players, as well as the game’s 1.5 million-plus animated characters, FIFA 22 offers players, coaches and fans a new way to think about and see the game. “FIFA has always been at the forefront of innovation, and with the launch of FIFA 22 we have taken that commitment to hyper-reality to the next level,” said Marcus Smith, vice president and general manager, EA SPORTS FIFA. “FIFA 22 marks a new era in football that will allow people to truly feel the power of the game, experience the emotion of it, and compete side-by-side with the world’s greatest players.”

HyperMotion Technology The success of FIFA 15 has led to a new level of speed, accuracy and responsiveness in FIFA 22. The game introduces “HyperMotion” technology, which takes advantage of the unique “Human Intelligence Technology” from the SportVU and Future Sports Group motion capture systems. HyperMotion leverages data from the world’s largest database of high-intensity, complete-match motion-capture data of real-life footballers in a custom data processing system and is used to power a number of FIFA 22 gameplay features. The result is athletes that move in game with lifelike fluidity, speed, power, and agility. As a first-time use of this technology, FIFA 22 is faster and more responsive than ever, with more ball control and transition speed than in previous editions. Interactions such as dribbling, using the

The 17-year-old, who stepped off the plane in Chicago's O'Hare airport with an array of protective equipment, has been helping his team to win football matches since he was nine years old. Initially, he was just a football jumble, and as soon as he learned how to kick the ball, he would try to score whenever he had the opportunity. However, he didn't give up football and has been playing in junior leagues in his city, when he was nine and thirteen. "I think that football is my passion and I play because I like it," he said. "I like football very much." However, his mother, María del Carmen Crespo Arbesú, has always said to him that "his true talent lies in painting". It is true, as Rafa is an autodidact, who doesn't need to attend classes or be in a class when he paints. "I don't do anything that I have to learn," he said. "I learn everything I have to learn from painting." After winning the title of First Prize at the Premio Antonio Sanchez
