. But I will not give instructions to those who don't know the rules. Nov 12, 2015. Conventionally, a battery pack for supplying driving electric power to an electric power-assisted steering apparatus or the like is provided with a plurality of batteries, a charger for charging the batteries by bringing the plurality of batteries into contact with a charging device, and a communication device for transmitting information regarding the status of the charging of the batteries. In an electric power steering apparatus, the relationship between steering angle of a steering wheel and the current value flowing through the battery is stored in a microcomputer, and driving electric power is supplied to an assist motor from the battery in accordance with a steering torque applied to the steering wheel (see, for example, Patent Document 1). In this case, the voltage of the battery must be determined in accordance with a battery performance such that the assist motor can be appropriately driven. Therefore, a battery voltage detection circuit is provided to determine the voltage of the battery, and information about the battery voltage is transmitted to the microcomputer via a signal line (see, for example, Patent Document 2). A battery pack is provided with a plurality of batteries for supplying driving electric power to the electric power-assisted steering apparatus. Each of the batteries includes a positive electrode and a negative electrode and a separator. Each of the positive electrode and the negative electrode is attached to a surface of a plate-like base material formed of lead and the separator is provided between the positive electrode and the negative electrode. The separator includes a plurality of separator sheets and a sealer provided on a peripheral portion of the separator sheet. The separator sheets are attached to the base material, and the surfaces of the positive electrode and the negative electrode are sealed by the sealer. In a battery pack provided with a battery voltage detection circuit, if a charged battery is replaced with an uncharged battery, the voltage of the uncharged battery rises during charging as well as during discharging and the voltage of the charged battery falls during discharging. Therefore, for example, Japanese Unexamined Patent Application Publication No. 2002-295957 discloses a technique in which in a battery voltage detection circuit, the charge and discharge characteristics are determined on the basis of a difference between a battery voltage just before charging and a battery voltage during discharging after charging is completed. "I've heard a lot of good things about the new Wunder Board project by John Neff and his team. I've been
