Got it running (with some work) inside the Raspberry Pi. I wanted to share screenshots and videos from the game. Click on the screens to make them bigger. That's the game screen from the other day: And here is the Star Trek Remastered Unity+Game Center game launched earlier this month: And below you can see few videos of the game in action: Game Center! Trajectory preview! Game Center higher resolution! Planets and Zones Observer Effect! Player (Work in Progress) Interactive Listing ... and more! Q: Does the order of a die have any impact on the dice thrown? Suppose I roll a 10 and then immediately followed by a 1. Can I be confident that rolling the 10 is more likely to be the result of that roll? A: No. The order is irrelevant. The order will even affect the outcome of the next roll, but not by affecting the probability of each roll. For example, consider a set of six dice with numbers 1 to 6. Roll 1, then 2, then 3... With high enough rolls, you can expect a fair dice-game and an equal chance of getting each combination. However if you repeat 1-2-3-1-2-3 with two identical dice, then it's not random anymore. Only 1.33% chance of getting 1-2-3. A feminist's dream: see this stunning infographic to become an instagram

My program is as follows:
int main() { int x; char c; scanf("%d %c", &x, &c); printf("%d %c", x, c); return 0; } I have run this on visual studio. cmd, xcode (Mac), gcc on linux, and this same error occurs in all. I have successfully compiled and run this simple program using gdb on windows, but I want to use gdb for linux. How can I do this? I have tried the following command line: gdb -x program.exe -q -ex "run" Note: I have tried other commands such as: gdb -ex "set $pc = 0x00404458" gdb -ex "run" A: You have to use linux gdb (gdb-multiarch) instead of the default /usr/bin/gdb. Look inside of the binary and you'll see that the binary was linked to libc.so.6 file.
