Post-dural puncture headache (PDPH) occurs in 3-10% of neuraxial anaesthetics. Several potential mechanisms of PDPH have been proposed including a direct effect of cerebrospinal fluid (CSF) on the vascular innervation of the dural membranes. This may be mediated by the effects of CSF on the vascular afferents, or the production of arachidonic acid metabolites. In addition, we know that CSF inflammation and the possible role of CSF factors in the induction of headache
