In (non-commutative) polynomial rings we have that If I and J are coprime, then $IJ = (I \cap J)^n$. As a corollary, let $S = R[x_1, \dots, x_n]$. For any ideal I that is coprime with the maximal ideal, we have that the radical of I is the biggest ideal that is coprime with I . Indeed, I^k is never coprime with I . Now, I also know that I and J are coprime if and only if IJ is the radical of IJ , that is, S/IJ is a domain. Question 1. Is there an example of two ideals I and J that are coprime but such that $I+J$ is not the radical of $I+J$? Question 2. Given a particular ideal I , can you compute all ideals J (in S) such that $I+J$ is the radical of $I+J$? A: For question 1: Suppose that $IJ = (I \cap J)^n$. Then I is not the radical of I . To see this, suppose $I = (I \cap J)^m$. Then $IJ = I \cap J^m \subseteq I$, since $I^m \subseteq J$. Dilinoleoylphosphatidylcholine-rich microemulsion formulation of curcumin: Characterization and pharmacological efficacy. The aim of this study was to develop a nano-emulsion of curcumin (CN) formulated with the lipid-like medium of dilinoleoylphosphatidylcholine (DLPC), characterized and evaluated for its in vitro and in vivo efficacy. In vitro characterization of CN was performed by measuring the CN release kinetics and comparing to DLPC-rich nanoemulsion (CN-

I guess I could use the UserPermission Object, but I am not seeing a straightforward method to find out how a user is logging on. A: It is impossible to be 100% sure about that. If you want to do that then you need to use CAML, so you need to get the user info from the login context and use CAML to query the list. Integration of social cognition in schizophrenia: links to risky decision making. Social cognitive impairments are currently considered to play an important role in pathogenesis and outcome of schizophrenia. Decision making is an important social behavior and may contribute to the core deficit in schizophrenia, i.e., the inability to detect and act on relevant environmental cues. The current review aims to provide a broad overview of the current evidence on the integration of social cognition in schizophrenia, including its relation with risky decision making. A concept analysis was carried out to determine the common and distinguishing properties of integrated cognition. Web of Science and PubMed were searched for relevant articles. Twenty four studies fulfilled the inclusion criteria. Risky decision making and integrated cognitive performance were consistently and strongly associated in schizophrenia. This link is moderated by social stressors such as social rejection and might reflect a core symptom dimension. Future studies should incorporate more complex social situations and disentangle the social and nonsocial processes leading to decision making. Additionally, methodological issues such as the role of executive functions, testing ecological variables, and discussing context independence should be addressed.In the
