Setting the Record If you want to burn a CD or DVD disc that can be played on a personal CD or DVD player, the player must recognize it as a computer disc. To make that happen, you need to know how to burn a _disc-to-disc copy_ as opposed to a _disc-to-disc copy_ _Disc-to-disc copy_ refers to a CD or DVD that is recorded from one disc to another disc. To burn a disc-to-disc copy, you need to have a CD- or DVD-ROM drive for the record- and play devices. You can use a disc-to-disc recorder if you have an optical disc burner. You can record audio or video on a CD or DVD disc. Although audio discs are popular with music lovers, DVDs are the more popular format for video since they offer higher video and audio quality. To make it easy to see how a DVD-ROM drive and recorder work together, think of a DVD-ROM drive as a small hard drive (as shown in Figure 10-2) and a DVD recorder as a small computer. If you put a DVD into a DVD-ROM drive, the DVD-ROM drive automatically recognizes the disc as an optical disc, loads the data from the disc into a computer memory, and then passes the data to your computer's memory for further processing. You can use the same DVD recorder to burn any recording from a computer memory. By doing so, the recorder not only saves time over having to find and load a disc-to-disc record and play device but also enables you to copy a digital recording

Introducing is an evolving and dynamic behaviour which transforms every person and every community with an open heart. Even though this process has already been ongoing over a period of many years, it's only recently been acknowledged as a powerful force for renewal. What's especially exciting is that this process is aligned with where we are as human beings, and so every one of us can participate. In this powerful process we are transforming ourselves, from the inner to the outer, and from the simple to the more complex. What we see when we allow and open up our hearts to the world, is that we see people doing incredible things in the world, helping each other, getting excited about the possibility of transformation. People who have the courage to be alive, take part in the transformation of the world, by connecting with the life force of the universe, and in doing this they contribute to the healing of the world. An immeasurable wealth of new possibilities is emerging in our world, which is being born through our very existence in the process of. It's really exciting that there's an awakening happening in our world, which really does look like it's going to make a difference. There's so much in this world that is suffering, and as a human race we have to choose if we want to be aligned to love and kindness, and to kindness, or if we want to continue to live in conflict and confusion. We see so much value in the people that have had the courage to transform themselves, that despite their self-inflicted suffering, people have seen them as heroes and inspiration. The inspiration and courage that they show to the world is just amazing. Mohanpur, Bhopal Mohanpur is a village in the Bhopal district of Madhya Pradesh, India. It is located in the Berasia tehsil.
