“As an early adopter of motion capture technology, FIFA is excited to use player data collected for gameplay innovation,” said Jeffrey Vilharouly, SVP of EA SPORTS technologies. “We used motion capture to analyze how players move, tackle, intercept and aerially challenge to accurately represent their influence on the game.” The new FIFA for PS4 and Xbox One introduces a global audience: in addition to the previously available English and Spanish languages, FIFA 22 also features Portuguese, German, French, Italian, Spanish, Japanese, Korean, Chinese, Russian and Arabic to provide fans from around the world with a choice of languages and dialects to enjoy the game. FIFA 22 also offers more customization options to players, with new options for players’ ratings, tactics, team line-ups, stadium settings and tactics, and more. To choose from a global audience of voices, fans can now adjust the pitch announcer’s voice pitch based on the players’ nationality. The announcer also refers to the national anthem of the country players are from while they are selected as starting or substitute players. And for the first time ever in any FIFA game, fans can unlock special editions of the game with custom player portraits, t-shirts, flags and licensed in-game apparel. The special editions are available for a limited time only. With its new technology, FIFA 22 will allow players to more naturally feel the physicality of dynamic movement through the ball, more realistically experience dangerous aerial duels and tackle a player on the ground, see the pitch surface more dynamically, more accurately maneuver and strike through the ball, feel the ball’s air drag, and more. FIFA 22 will be available on March 27 for PlayStation®4 computer entertainment system, Xbox One and Xbox 360® games and entertainment systems, the PC (Windows 10) and Nintendo Switch™ hand-held system. New Features - Micro Mii™: Experience new ways to play in the new PS4™ and Xbox One versions of the FIFA franchise. With the return of the legendary Micro Mii™ customization in FIFA 22, you can now customize your look, play in-game or even make your own FIFA 22 custom squad by placing Micro Mii™ characters from the FIFA catalog into the game.
