Leukocyte phagocytosis and tumor cell killing are enhanced by T cells and macrophages, respectively, in response to "lymphokines" secreted by activated lymphocytes. The majority of studies on the effects of lymphokines involve the actions of soluble factors on isolated cells in vitro. In this study, we examined whether effector or target cells would also be capable of binding lymphokines. Murine T lymphocytes and target cell lines were incubated with murine natural killer (NK)-associated factors (NAF) that augment NK activity. NAF could also enhance NK activity when added to guinea pig spleen cells or human lymphocytes. Most of the target cells became adherent to latex-coated glass slides in culture with

NAF. Binding studies with 125I-labeled NAF were performed using polystyrene beads coated with NAF. Targets were incubated with 125I-labeled NAF and isolated with a magnet for b7e8fdf5c8

Tami Nguyen, 28, was charged with assault and false imprisonment as a result of her arrest on June 13, 2012, Lt. Greg Demeritt said. She was held for five hours and subsequently fired. Nguyen, who is Asian American, was stopped by officers who suspected her of drug possession while she was delivering Chinese food to a residence. The officers found nothing illegal, but Nguyen was handcuffed and placed in a police car, her son, Peter Nguyen, a 21-year-old college student, said. "She was put into the back of the squad car and the police took her in," he said. "She didn't know that they were taking her to jail." Demeritt said the charges against Nguyen were dropped after she was exonerated by an internal affairs investigation. "After the sergeant was presented with the facts and determined that the arrest was illegal, the case was dropped," he said. Nguyen's son said his mother was upset because the arrest cost her her job. "I don't think that she's being malicious. She wants to help the community by becoming a police officer," he said. "But she wants to do the right thing." Nguyen had been working in a clerical position at the police department for about six weeks before her arrest, Demeritt said. The case was investigated by a squad of investigators who were told the police video of the arrest was considered inadmissible. The case was reviewed with the help of a prosecutor, the investigative unit's top investigator and supervisory police officials, Demeritt said. The Internal Affairs report, which included the officers' statement and audio of the exchange, was forwarded to the city attorney's office. Nguyen was also given the option to file her
