This data will play a huge part in player movement in FIFA 22, where players can more freely switch between first- and third-person, and why they'll be able to use new, dynamic animations. You can also use your brain to gain speed and direction in FIFA. This technology enables a new micro-challenges known as 'Exploratory Play' in FIFA. Exploratory Play challenges the player to make progress through a series of match-simulation-inspired 'brain teasers', which will be released gradually as part of the season. Even if the 'HyperMotion Technology' isn't a brand new feature, you'll be able to see it in FIFA. Players will be able to take direction and be able to tackle, approach opponents and chase balls in familiar ways - with full, realistic body movement. Hover and Acceleration When you take control of a player for the first time in FIFA, the player will seem sluggish, just like real-life players. But this is just down to how easy the on-screen controls are to use. You can tap and press the accelerator, drift left and right, pull back and tap the pass button all at once. This makes it straightforward for you to glide around the pitch, building up speed. As you level up, you'll begin to unlock more refined manoeuvres such as lean and cut, where players just press a button to keep gliding and moving forward, or tapping the acceleration button to increase the pace. New Direction-focused actions FIFA rewards you for knowing how to move the ball around the pitch. With our new direction-focused actions, you'll be able to choose to press A to predict where the ball will be, B to have it pass you, and D to shoot. As you level up, you'll unlock more sophisticated methods of controlling a pass, such as pressing buttons for corners, lobs and runs. To reach the player who has the ball, simply press A, C, X or Y, and if you press B to make it a pass, the ball will be over the top of the screen and you'll receive a handy 3D view of the surroundings. Utility Play Utility play is a big part of FIFA. Players will have to manage their stamina effectively throughout a match, especially if they play long games.

FUT introduces dozens of new transfer targets and gameplay enhancements, delivering even more ways to build your dream squad. Choose your preferred way of playing by controlling the pace of the game, change formations, use Team Styles to master new tactics or even challenge fellow fans to friendly matches. GAMEPLAY ADDITIONS FIFA 22 is powered by the most accurate and sophisticated AI in the franchise. It reacts to every change on the pitch in real-time, so you'll never be caught by surprise on the pitch again. New dribble system - Developed with feedback from the community, the new dribble system has made a major impact on the gameplay. Players who can control the ball and make their opponents move in the wrong direction are more likely to get out of trouble and surprise defenders. New off-ball system - Offers a more dynamic approach to AI off-ball movement. Creates more dynamic behaviour between players, especially in situations where players are close together. It delivers greater unpredictability in situations where a player attacks the ball past a teammate who's trying to maintain possession. New Attack Radar - Intelligent AI reacts to a player running past a defender to create a goal-scoring opportunity. Now it's possible to use off-the-ball movement to cut inside and create space for shots, crosses, and other attacks. New tactical AI - FIFA 22's A.I. was designed to lead the team based on player positions on the pitch, formations, and more. Now, players will be more likely to behave in a certain way, or take certain actions, depending on the situation, as they play, react and progress through the game. Team Styles - Team Styles lets you tailor the game to how you want it played. You can choose from over 60 game types, including 3-1-2-2, 4-1-4-1 and 3-3-3. It's the ultimate tool to personalise your gaming experience and to help you quickly get the game playing the way you want it to play. Referees - FIFA 22's Referee has been enhanced to support a deeper simulation of officiating and to function as a leader in the stadium, on the pitch, and in the media. The system will dynamically adapt to different situations and better reflect the referee's decision-making process. New Custom Themes -
