This is the 4K Upscaling of Insanity, but it is so much more than that... Working in UHD, meaning Ultra HD in a 4K format, comes with some strong visual demands - big on the screen, but lacking, as always, a big budget to satisfy them. With such a short timeline and practically no resources allocated to the project, this is what House of VFX thought they could deliver with a 4K source, minimal resource requirements, and a simplified VFX workflow - and it's a great thing they did manage to pull off. The production was tasked with 4K upscaling a 1080p signal in a post-production pipeline, using it as a source for higher resolution outputs. As they were aiming for a totally post-designed look and feel, including a limited colour palette, they decided to just deliver the source image in-camera raw. 'Insanity' was shot with RED Epic cameras.
